

Goodbye August, and a big hello to September.

Description

How are you feeling right now?

Image: Fillingthejars.com

It's the first day of September. Traditionally arrival of this month is symbolic of change. It marks the end of summers and ushers in the new season of fall.

And right now I'm feeling excited.

Next few months are slated for a major change in my professional life and there's excitement about what's in store for me next.

The first WhatsApp message I received this morning on WhatsApp this morning is Why don't you try Entrepreneurship? It's from my professor from business school and my mind is like : is this a signal from the universe?

Frankly, starting something on my own is surely on my mind these days as I'm mulling over pursuing my passion of wines through the medium of entrepreneurship or a business venture.

Just as September heralds a new season, it also holds a promise of change in my life one which should take shape in balance months of this year. And I'm excited about this.