

My grudge against myself

Description

Are you holding a grudge? About?

Humans are creatures of emotion and we all have held grudges against someone in our life at some time or other. I'm no different, since there have been times when I have clung on to grudges against people. But with passage time and wisdom of age, I have learned to do away with all these with self introspection and forgiveness.

Today however, I shall talk about a grudge which I held against myself for a long time and that was because I intentionally deleted my earlier WordPress Account many years ago.

Well I will not dwell into reasons for doing it, but it was certainly an impulsive act which I regretted very soon after.

Run over by remorse, I opened a new website again, fortunately with the same name as Wineglitz. I approached WordPress to help me salvage my deleted posts and their support team went out of the way to help.

But there was a limitation, since once something gets deleted from their main server, it is technically not possible to retrieve it after certain time. All credits to them though, since some of my earlier content did get revived.

But my grudge against myself continued. There was this one blogpost I had written on my experience on going through the WSET Level 3 Exam and going on to pass it with Merit. It was a beautiful one, not only as a memoir but also as a first hand advise to others who were planning or going through this certification. I could not retrieve it.

WSET III Advanced Certification Lapel Pin. Image: Betterwithage.sg

But as they say time is a great healer and with time I let go of this grudge. Gradually I rebuilt my blog by writing so many new posts.

And i also feel that in certain ways the new beginning has been better since my writing has improved a lot over time. New website has also brought me in contact with new people and now I have all of you wonderful friends with me in my blogging journey.

Cheers !!