

International Organisation of Vine and Wine (OIV) elects a Brazilian as its president

Description

Regina Vanderlinde, a Brazilian professor of biotechnology, has been elected as the president of the International Organisation of Vine and Wine (OIV) for the next three years.

Holding a doctorate in biological sciences with a focus in enology from the Université de Bordeaux Regina has been a member of the Brazilian delegation to the OIV and is the third consecutive female President of the OIV.

Election of a Brazilian as the head of OIV fares well for South American wine region and should bring a positive focus on wine growing countries from the continent.

Winegitz follows the viticulture in upcoming wine regions in South America like Brazil and Uruguay etc and will keep posting updates.
